FORTY six Hackney teams took part in 27 different sports for this year's London Youth Games. The annual competition involves all 33 London boroughs and is the capital's biggest youth sports competition. Hackney finished 12th overall – which is its second highest ever result – securing 34 individual medals, as well as one gold, one silver, and four team bronze medals. Competitors took part in sports ranging from water polo (pictured) to BMX. The Council is currently on the look out for young people, aged seven to 18, to represent Hackney in next year's London Youth Games. For more info and pics, see pages 8-9.

Mossbourne given go ahead for new school

Main: A computer generated image of the new Mossbourne Victoria Park Academy; Cardinal Pole School, Victoria Park Road (inset)

MORE than 800 new secondary school places are set to be created, after a new academy was given the go ahead by the Council's planning committee.

The new Mossbourne Victoria Park Academy – a modern, four storey block – will be built alongside a 19th century building which once housed Cardinal Pole school.

Cllr Rita Krishna, Cabinet Member for Children's Services, said: "We're delighted to be able to build a brand new secondary school in an area of our borough where demand is projected to be particularly high in the coming years.

"Mossbourne Victoria Park is one of the ways we're planning for the future to make sure we meet this need with high quality schools.

> "We're delighted to be able to build a brand new secondary school in Hackney"

"Despite this being an immensely complicated project involving a compact site and a listed building, with a very limited budget from the Government, we've been able to adapt the plans to take on board residents' concerns.

"I hope this means we'll be able to satisfy both residents living near the site and the families who desperately want reassurance that there will be a good, local school to which they can send their children in years to come.

"Mossbourne Academy has achieved some phenomenal results and I'm sure its second school will do equally as well."

During an informal consultation, some residents raised concerns about the positioning of the new building, so the Council and its architects went back to the drawing board and altered the plans in response.

Planning consent was granted at a meeting on 31 July and, pending the necessary final approvals by the Greater London Authority and Secretary of State, work will soon begin, to allow the school to open to pupils next September.

The original building will provide teaching facilities, including a library, while the former chapel will be used as a multi-functional drama space. The new building will accommodate a sports hall and assembly facilities, which will be open to the public, as well as dining, performance and specialist teaching facilities.

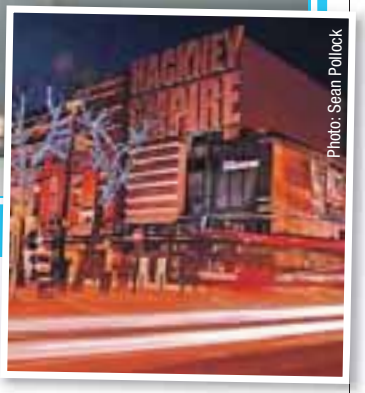

Cardinal Pole Catholic School moved to a purpose built new building in Morning Lane, E9, in September last year.

Lord Alan Sugar provided the Hackney Empire an interest free loan that allowed it to take on insurers Aviva after its building contractor went bust during renovation works in 2003

You're sued!

HACKNEY Empire has won a £1.1million payout from insurers Aviva following an eight-year 'David versus Goliath' legal battle backed by Hackney-born Lord Alan Sugar.

The theatre was left in financial difficulties after its building contractor went bust in 2003 and Aviva – then known as Norwich Union – refused to pay out on a £1.1million bond to complete the renovation work. Lord Sugar provided an interest free loan that allowed the Empire to take on the multi-national, while lawyers CMS Cameron McKenna acted on a 'no win, no fee' agreement.

> "This win against Aviva is of enormous significance to Hackney Empire"

Hackney Empire won in the first instance in 2011, and again when Aviva appealed last year. The Supreme Court refused Aviva permission to further appeal over interest owed to the Empire this year, forcing the UK's largest insurer to pay the full value of the bond, including interest and costs.

Clarie Middleton, Hackney Empire Chief Executive, said: "This win is of enormous significance to Hackney Empire and sets the seal on a new chapter in the organisation's history."

Rupert Choat, of CMS Cameron McKenna, added: "This was a David versus Goliath battle, but we had a giant of our own fighting with us – in the shape of Lord Sugar."

Beautifully restored 18th century mansion Clissold House

Clissold House nominated as best event space of the year

GRADE II listed building Clissold House has been nominated in the best small event space of the year category in the Event Magazine Awards.

After an extensive refurbishment, the house reopened its doors to the public last year. Since then, the 18th century mansion house has become a popular venue for weddings and other celebrations.

The Council-funded restoration project has made the most of the building's large ornate windows, which flood the building with natural light, and look out on to the park. The building also boasts two main rooms on the first floor with an outdoor terrace, as well as a dining room and drawing room.

The second floor has three further rooms, which provide more space for smaller meetings and intimate gatherings.

Venue Manager, Emma Finch, said: "We're over the moon to be nominated as it really does reflect the beauty of the house and the quality of the events that we do here."

The awards ceremony, which celebrates the creative, exhibition and experiential sectors of the live events industry, is set to take place at the Roundhouse in Camden on 4 October. For more info on Clissold House, visit: www.hackneyvenues.com/clissold-house

Green light for 765-home regeneration scheme on Kings Crescent

THE Council has granted planning permission for a £100million, 765-home regeneration scheme.

Councillors gave the go ahead at a planning meeting on 31 July, following the approval of a five-year masterplan for regeneration of the Kings Crescent Estate, N4, last year.

Proposals include increasing the number of homes for social renting on the estate from 195 to 274, as well as providing 115 for shared ownership, and 376 for private sale, along with a community centre and retail space.

Solar panels, eco-roofing, and a combined heat and power plant are also expected to achieve carbon dioxide savings of 25 per cent.

The design team was led by Karakusevic Carson Architects with Henley Halebrown Rorrison, muf architecture/art and Peter Brett Associates.

The Council currently has a tender out for a developer to build the new homes, while 275 existing Council homes on the estate are in the process of being renovated to above Decent Homes standards.

Cllr Philip Glanville, Cabinet Member for Hackney Homes and Regeneration Estates, said: "The Council made a commitment to build new homes and refurbish existing ones on the Kings Crescent estate, and this decision will enable us to continue delivering on this pledge."

Wat-er view of the park

ONE year on from the London 2012 Games, areas of Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park have now been opened to the public.

To help mark the occasion, families and community groups were invited on a boat tour around the waterways within the park.

They took in the impressive architectural sights of the Olympic Stadium and ArcelorMittal Orbit observation tower, as well as all the wildlife that lives along the river bank. The tour was one of a series organised for Hackney residents by the London Legacy Development Corporation.

Parent Katarzyna Anderson said: "I loved being on the boat and seeing the Olympic Park from the canal side. It's such a different atmosphere being away from the crowds, being with my son and the other children."

Child minder Holly Moyce added: "We've been talking about the Olympic Park back at home, so it's good for the kids to be able to visualise it, especially the 'red statue', they get really excited about seeing what they saw on TV in real-life."

"I've lived in Hackney for the past 18 years and it's lovely to see how the borough has evolved since the announcement of the Games coming to the east side of London." Sarah Salem, tour guide

Resident of 18 years and tour guide, Sarah Salem, kept day trippers entertained by sharing her knowledge of the regeneration which the 2012 Games fuelled in the borough.

She said: "I'm a huge lover of the history of Hackney and I enjoy informing, not just the adults, but the children of the beauty of Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park."

After the sporting excitement of last year's Games, residents and visitors now have the opportunity to discover more of what the park has to offer.

The Northern Parklands are free to wander around and feature a new cafe and children's adventure playground. While the Copper Box in Hackney has reopened as a new sport and community centre with a range of courts, gym, studios and a cafe. It is also the new home of the London Lions basketball team and will host major sports tournaments.

The south of the park, which includes the Aquatics Centre, Velopark and Eton Manor is due to open next spring, providing swimming, cycling, tennis and hockey facilities, as well as more open and events space.

Residents can access the park from Hackney Wick Overground.

Fun on the green

A FUN day on Mabley Green was a chance for residents to take advantage of the hot weather, sample some barbecue, and look over the Council's outline plans for the future of the green.

Tasty treats for the event on 13 July were provided by Shades Catering, while young people had the chance to play with a giant Connect Four game and get their faces painted.

Council officers were also on hand to discuss proposals for the green, which include the creation of a new accessible play space and an area of 'edible planting' toward the centre of the green which would incorporate fruit trees, bushes and herbs.

Alongside these ideas, the Council is progressing long-held plans to complete a second all weather pitch.

Colville Estate fun day informs residents about regen plans

OVER 150 people enjoyed a day of sunshine, music from a steel band, bouncy castle and barbecue while finding out more about the Council's regeneration of their estate.

Residents were able to see early designs and models, by Karakusevic Carson Architects and David Chipperfield Architects, for the third phase of the redevelopment of Colville Estate, in Shoreditch. Representatives from both firms were also on hand to answer questions about the programme at the event on 13 July.

Members of the Colville Estate Tenants and Residents Association (CETRA) got to discuss the proposals from the perspective of tenants and leaseholders, with support from PPCR, the estate's independent adviser service.

Cllr Philip Glanville, Cabinet Member for Hackney Homes and Regeneration Estates, said: "The Council made a commitment to providing new homes for Colville residents, replacing ones that aren't fit for purpose, and amid challenging financial circumstances.

"Every Colville resident deserves a high quality new home, and it was good to see so many people finding out more about how we're doing this in the coming years."

The estate is being regenerated by the Council over a 15-year period, replacing 435 existing homes with 935 new ones for social renting, shared ownership and private sale. The first phase, Bridport House, was completed in 2011, providing 41 homes for social renting and co-funded by the Council and the Greater London Authority.

Council launches national minimum wage awareness campaign

THE Council has launched a campaign aimed at raising awareness of the national minimum wage amongst employees in Hackney.

From 12 August, staff will be delivering posters and flyers to all libraries and Council-owned buildings in the borough, which highlight what people should do if they believe anyone is not receiving the national minimum wage.

Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, said: "We know that nationally and in our borough, low pay is an ongoing problem in certain jobs and we want workers and their employers to be aware of the national minimum wage and the right to receive at least that rate."

The minimum wage is a legal requirement and all employers must pay this to staff over school leaving age. Councils currently have no powers to enforce against employers that do not pay this wage.

Mayor Pipe added: "The Council is also committed to making Hackney a fair pay borough. This is why it already pays all its directly employed staff the London Living Wage (LLW) and we are close to ensuring this is the case for all our contracted staff. We believe we could be the first London borough to achieve full LLW-compliance."

The minimum wage rate depends on age and whether or not someone is an apprentice. The new rates come in to force from 1 October. Anyone aged 21 and over should then receive £6.31 per hour.

Anyone not getting the minimum wage should call the Government Pay and Work Rights Helpline on: 0800 917 2368; or visit: www.gov.uk/am-i-getting-minimum-wage

Let the music play

MORE than 4,500 Hackney pupils took part in what is believed to be London's biggest schools music and dance festival.

The young people, from primary and secondary schools, performed at Clapton's Round Chapel in a series of concerts from 2 to 11 July. They were watched by proud parents, carers and fellow pupils. The Hackney Music and Dance Festival features some of the best young talent in the borough. Now in its 16th year, the festival started as a three day event, but has proved so popular it now runs for over two weeks.

> "This is a great way to showcase the wealth of talent being developed in music and arts in Hackney schools"

Cllr Rita Krishna, Cabinet Member for Children's Services, said: "This is a great way to showcase the wealth of talent being developed in music and arts in Hackney schools. The borough has a strong reputation in these fields, and seeing the emerging talent on display during the festival, it's easy to see why."

Top of their game

Forty six Hackney teams competed in 27 different sports for this year's London Youth Games

OVER 500 young people represented Hackney against the capital's other 32 boroughs in this year's London Youth Games.

Since last November, the borough's 46 teams have competed in 27 different sports, culminating in a finals weekend at Crystal Palace National Sports Centre on 6 and 7 July.

The event has been London's biggest youth sports competition since 1977, when it was launched to mark the Queen's Silver Jubilee. Since then, London teams have battled it out every year for the Jubilee Trophy.

> "Well done to everyone who competed for Hackney and maintained our place as an elite sporting borough"

This year, 21 borough teams finished in the top 10 in their field, and Hackney finished 12th overall – which is its second highest ever result.

Young sportsmen and women won 34 individual medals in disability athletics; kayak sprint; diving; sailing; rowing; judo; disability swimming; indoor rowing; aquathon; adapted indoor rowing; athletics and diving. Collecting 10 gold, 14 silver and 15 bronze medals in total.

Hackney teams also secured gold in disability tennis, girls handball, and girls table tennis; silver in adapted indoor rowing; and bronze in boys disability swimming, tennis, girls cricket, and rowing.

There were many great team and individual performances throughout the Games, but the standout achievement came from the girls table tennis team which finished first in their competition for the first time in the 33 year history of the London Youth Games.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, said: "Well done to everyone who competed for Hackney and maintained our place as one of London's elite sporting boroughs.

"Once again you have made us proud. Congratulations should also go to the coaches and trainers who work so hard encouraging and bringing the best out of the Hackney teams."

The Council is on the look out for young people, aged seven to 18, to represent Hackney in next year's London Youth Games.

Yaarah Schools founder, Maire Tejani, received an MBE for services to charity and education

IMAGINE a school which is little more than a tree and small hut; where children have to bring their own chairs, and if it's raining or too hot it won't open. This is what Maire Tejani saw only a few years ago in rural villages in her Ghanaian homeland, shaking her into action.

The civil servant founded Shoreditch-based charity Yaarah Schools (meaning 'children') to tackle some of the problems faced by under-privileged children in rural Africa. Maire explains: "We speak to children and they want to be doctors, lawyers, the next Obama. They are keen to learn, they don't always have to go to work on the farm."

For village elders, however, it can seem risky: many parents didn't go to school so the importance of structured education isn't always clear. For them, children can immediately help the family by going to work and the community doesn't always see the possible gains made by committing resources to building schools.

Maire says: "It's a completely different world. These cultures have a certain way of working – there are chiefs, elders and councillors, and what the chief says goes. But we respect that and understand we can't just bulldoze in with our ideas while at the same time we have to motivate them."

With her team of UK volunteers she creates partnerships, fundraises and spends time in the village to buying materials, employing builders, ensuring the project continues when she isn't physically there.

The charity's first school was built in 2012 – just two-and-a-half years after Yaarah Schools was set up. Adaklu Aziedukope, a remote village in the Volta region of south Ghana, now has school facilities such as tables, stationery items, books, drinking water and chairs.

> "We speak to children and they want to be doctors, lawyers, the next Obama"

Maire explains: "It takes £3,000 to build a classroom that's kitted out. Even £10 can make a difference, it can buy a chair so a child won't have to carry it to school."

Work has now started on a second project in North Ghana. Yet the charity still relies upon basic fundraising. Maire says: "We don't have any grants or lottery money, we just put on events like talent shows in the UK or dinners and dances. The little money we do get – with the help from our volunteers – we really appreciate. But I really have a passion for this and believe in it. I've got a full time job, a family and I've been studying for a BSc so it hasn't been easy. Usually I'm up until 2 or 3am working on Yaarah Schools, but I want to make a difference."

However, her efforts haven't gone unnoticed, and in June it was announced she will receive an MBE for services to charity and education. She continues: "I came back from work and saw the official envelope and thought 'what have I done to the taxman?' Then I read and saw the Prime Minister and thought 'what have I got to do with the Prime Minister?' When I read some more, I was so shocked I couldn't sleep. I don't even think I've done that much yet, maybe I don't deserve it, but it's been a good thing for the charity and everyone involved."

She added: "We went back to Volta to see the progression and they're doing really well. People are getting involved and can see how education sustains a family. Plus the school is being used for community events and adult education.

"The women have started taking English lessons and setting up businesses to help sustain the school. One parent told me now he can read signs on the road. This is about making the schools sustainable, if the charity isn't around in 10 years, we want the school to remain."

THE GREEN GENIE

All your green questions answered

Q. I was very upset by recent reports of fish dying in the River Lea due to pollution. Is there anything I can do to help reduce this?

A. There are lots of contributing factors, but there are some things which people can check in their own homes which could help to reduce pollution in the river.
Up to 10 per cent of homes could have misconnected drain pipes. This means that waste water from washing machines, sinks or showers may flow directly into drain pipes. Harmful chemicals and waste may then end up flowing down the drain and into rivers, instead of being sent through sewer pipes for treatment.
To see if this could be a problem in your home, and to learn simple steps to check your connections, visit: www.connectright.org.uk
If you are aware of any pollution making its way into rivers or canals call the Environment Agency Pollution Reporting line on: 0800 80 70 60.

Tree-mendous fun

PUPILS from Thomas Fairchild Community School lent a helping hand watering and mulching newly planted trees in Shoreditch Park.

The 42 trees, worth £10,000, were planted by Council parks' staff and Barclays bank volunteers at the beginning of the year. They are a mixture of large, semi-mature trees, some of which are four to seven metres tall.

They were donated by Barcham Trees and Ecobuild and include eight multi-stemmed Himalayan birch, six multi-stemmed Tibetan cherries, eleven multi-stemmed silver birch, as well as alder, blue cedar, double flowering cherries, purple plum, ornamental pear and whitebeam.

> "I really enjoyed using the wheelbarrows and putting on the mulch"

Youngsters were also quizzed on their knowledge of the trees and plants that can be found in parks around the borough.

Tyler, 10, who was at the 15 July event, said: "I really enjoyed using the wheelbarrows and putting on the mulch. It was exciting because I was able to help the trees in my local community. I can't wait to see them grow."

Macie, 11, added: "I really loved learning lots about the different types of trees, the quiz was fun and I liked using the hose pipe to water the plants."

Teacher Helen Jenkins said: "Year Six thoroughly enjoyed the morning. It was a brilliant opportunity for them to begin to understand the nature within their local community. It was an experience they had never had before and allowed them to learn new skills. They will enjoy monitoring the trees' progress."

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, added: "Getting young children involved with the work the Council does in our parks is a fun way for them to learn about their local environment. Now they've got a real connection to Shoreditch Park and I'm sure they'll enjoying watching the trees grow."

Two Hackney food-growing projects up for awards

TWO Hackney food-growing schemes have been shortlisted for a national award.

The Growing Kitchen in Hoxton, and The Patchwork Farm project, are both in the running for awards which honour outstanding community initiatives that have been funded by the Local Food programme.

The Growing Kitchen received £10,000 in 2009 to enable residents to manage a community food growing site on Wenlock Barn Estate. This included facilitating the creation of a resident-led management committee, and increasing food-growing, horticulture and practical skills on the estate by providing technical workshops. The project now involves over 100 residents.

The Growing Kitchen and The Patchwork Farm are up for awards

The Patchwork Farm project received £124,643 in 2010 to create a series of organic growing sites across Hackney. It also offers training in organic urban food growing to local people with the aim of helping them generate their own income from selling produce.

The project has so far created nine new food growing sites on disused land in the borough, and trained 14 new food growers, many of whom were unemployed, including ten who are now self-employed.

The Local Food scheme distributes grants from the Big Lottery Fund to projects that help make locally grown food accessible and affordable to communities.

News in brief

Green Flags for Hackney parks

THE Council celebrated retaining its 15 Green Flags, which recognise the UK's best green spaces.

National environmental charity Keep Britain Tidy re-awarded the 15 prestigious flags to parks in Hackney – among the highest number in London.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, said: "This is great news for Hackney and it really highlights the quality of our parks and green spaces. Our parks have something for everyone."

Green Flags encourage a high level of environmental standards, creating a benchmark of excellence. To be eligible for an award, parks must also submit a five-year plan for continued maintenance and improvement.

Hackney has the highest proportion of open space in any inner London borough, ranging from the biggest concentration of football pitches at Hackney Marshes to Hoxton Square, a beautiful public garden.

Open East Festival

27-28 July, Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park

THIS festival weekender of arts brought thousands of visitors to the city's newest public space to celebrate the opening of Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park.
With the 2012 Anniversary Games taking place just a stone's throw away in the Olympic Stadium, there was an electric atmosphere around the site.
Focusing on the creativity of East London, the festival was a fun-filled combination of multicultural sounds, delicious food and local art. From brass & contemporary jazz by the Hackney Colliery Band to Brazilian Carnival drum beats. A highlight was a performance by Soul Caribbean, delivering the best island vibes on the Barbican stage. African beats by acts Mali Foli with Amadou & Mariam got the waistlines working before the heavy rain unfortunately frightened many of the festival goers away. The Waterboys lifted the spirits however with a performance featuring their most memorable hits including 'Fisherman's Blues', 'When Ye Go Away' & 'A Girl Called Johnny'.
A grand finale culminated in a light show on the River Lea, turning it a shade of emerald green. Open East was a day to remember; the multicultural vibes represented the best of modern Britain.

FREDDIE MCGREGOR

Lovebox

19-21 July, Victoria Park

WITH tons of stages, phenomenal music, plus dozens of DJ tents and bars not too far away, there wasn't anything Lovebox lacked to satisfy festival-goers at this three day event.

On Saturday, revellers had a choice of house, dance, pop, rap, RnB and more, so it was well worth exploring the whole Victoria Park site as every pit stop had the best vibes.

The amazing atmosphere meant that Lovebox was about more than just the big name acts. It was also about meeting new people, taking pictures and shaking a leg with others who didn't feel like strangers. The diversity in the crowd screamed unity and you just had to get in the middle of the crowd and hear the speakers vibrate your eardrums.

On the main stage, neo-soul pinup D'Angelo continued his comeback, performing a back catalogue of hits, alongside a teaser of new songs from his long-awaited third album. But the highlight was headliner Plan B, who took to the stage to the biggest screams of the day, and was a commanding, intense presence, delivering hits 'Stay Too Long', 'Ill Manors' and 'Pieces' in front of an ecstatic home crowd.

On Sunday, there were a few setbacks, with the festival grounds reduced in size, and Lil' Kim failing to materialise. But Lovebox favourite Kelis stepped up to the plate delivering a crowd pleasing set, while there was lots to be enjoyed away from the main stage from a rare appearance by UK clubbing legend DJ Harvey to the perennially popular Horse Meat Disco and its hardworking crew of naughty trannies.

Urswick School pupils shared the best actor in the Rudolf Walker inter-school drama awards; role model winner Reece Reid with Mandy Haberman (inset)

Accolade for actors

FIVE budding thespians from The Urswick School shared a 'best actor' award at this year's Rudolph Walker inter-school drama awards.

> "The mentors are so key to the success of this programme; these actors give up their time to support these young people"

Robbie Efekele, Jiva Efete, Reece Reid, Kaito Henry-Bell and Michael Perkins all delivered top notch performances in self-penned drama 'The Brothers', leading judges to take the unprecedented step of giving the whole cast the award. Reece Reid also won the role model award, after being nominated by his teacher Sarah Conway.

Seven schools were shortlisted for the final of the annual competition at Millfield Theatre, Edmonton, on 14 July.

The young people were mentored by professional actors and had to write, direct and act in a play, as well as submit a 60-second ad about why they wanted to take part.

EastEnders star Rudolf said: "The mentors are so key to the success of this programme; these actors give up their time to support these young people."

Randal Cremer School hosts big send off for headteacher

PUPILS at Randal Cremer School, E2, marked the retirement of their headteacher with a celebratory playing out session in the street.

Parents and staff organised the two-hour event as part of the school's Health Heroes project, which works to promote healthy lifestyles among children and families.

Valerie Figaro, who retired after 10 years as head, said: "As many of the children spend too much time indoors, it was a welcome change to be able to shut the street for a couple of hours so the kids can enjoy playing freely whilst parents and staff come together."

Hackney was the first London borough to adopt a Play Streets scheme – allowing residents and community organisations to apply for a temporary play street order (TPSO) to close a road. So far residents in 16 streets and two schools have taken part in the scheme.

News in brief

Hackney pupils get involved in First World War exhibition

A FIRST World War exhibition has opened at Hackney Museum, which uncovers the story of how the conflict changed the lives of people in the borough.

Curated by children from two Hackney schools and community volunteers, the exhibition is part of a local heritage project called 'Hackney Remembers' and will run until 28 September.

To create content for the exhibition, pupils from Springfield Primary School researched the effect war had on East London Jewish soldiers serving in the British Army.

While youngsters from St John and St James' Primary School looked at the Hackney families left behind when men went off to fight. The exhibition will transfer to the Jewish Military Museum in October and then travel around Hackney schools next year.

'Hackney Remembers' is run by theatre company Fifth Word in partnership with Hackney Museum, the Jewish Military Museum and Hackney Archives. It is funded by the Heritage Lottery Fund (HLF).

Mayor launches music award

YOUNG musicians can get a helping hand courtesy of the Mayor of Hackney's Music Award.

Working with Hackney Learning Trust's Music Service, Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, has established a fund to help young musicians, and is now welcoming the first set of applications in autumn.

The awards are open to local schools' music departments, under three categories:

1. Pupil award of up to £1,000 – for achievement in instrumental learning (nominated by their school; one award for a primary pupil, one for secondary)
2. Instrumental ensemble award of up to £5,000 – to support instrumental ensemble development in schools (one award for a primary school, one for secondary)
3. Excellence in music education award of up to £3,000 – to recognise primary and secondary music practice (awarded to a school).

Mayor Pipe said: "I'm delighted to announce the inaugural Mayor's Music Award, which will provide financial assistance and recognition to some of Hackney's brightest musical talent."

Applications must be received by 7 October. Winners will be announced at the Hackney Music Gala at the Hackney Empire on 7 November. For more info, or an application form, e-mail: musicservice@learningtrust.co.uk

Sports funding

Main: Frank Moore, 13, cycling; Mayor Jules Pipe; Vanessa Humphrey, 17, kayak slalom; Aminuor Islam,15, cycling; Youth Sports Fund awardees show off their grants (above)

TALENTED young people received grants from the Council's Youth Sports Fund at an awards ceremony on 24 July.

Since 2007, over 300 up and coming sportspeople have received a total of £114,633 from the fund, which is money secured from sportswear giant Nike for its unauthorised use of the Hackney logo.

The funding supports young athletes who are committed to becoming the best they can be in their chosen sport.

Bella Dmochowska was selected for the GB under-17 women's fencing team last October. She said: "I'm really grateful for my grant as fencing is such an expensive sport. The money will help to pay for me to go to a training camp in Denmark in preparation for the new season in September."

Aminur Islam is currently training with the British Cycling Eastern Regional school of racing, and competing in regional youth circuit races. He said: "It has been a pleasure receiving the Youth Sports Fund grant. Thank you very much for choosing me for this award."

Vanessa Humphrey represented Hackney in the London Youth Games and went on to manage the canoeing team.

She said: "Hackney gave me the first opportunity to compete in the youth games and when I won a medal in 2011, I became dedicated to getting better. I do this sport because it's challenging and fun. The money that I have received will help to pay for a competition boat as they are really expensive, it will also help me become even faster."

> "I'm really grateful to the Youth Sports Fund for my grant as fencing is such an expensive sport"

Recipients of a gold or silver award also received a fully paid, or half price membership of one GLL-run leisure centre in London.

The Youth Sport Fund grants are worth up to £500. There are two further opportunities to apply for funding in 2013/14. The closing dates are 20 September and 9 January.

News in brief

What makes a teen craze?

By Hilary Raja, 15

FROM 'The Hunger Games' trilogy to One Direction, one of the main features of teenage life is following a fandom – whether it's books like 'Twilight', with fans naming themselves 'Twi-Hards', or Justin Bieber fans naming themselves 'Beliebers'. But what makes a book or a performer so important for young adults?

Arguably the original book craze was Harry Potter, with the first book released back in 1997. JK Rowling creates an entire world, complete with its own curriculum and legal system, incorporating class discrimination and corruption – taking topics and simplifying them to appeal to children.

The Twilight saga is based on the blossoming romance between 17-year-old Bella Swan and 104-year-old vampire Edward Cullen, and the struggles they face in their inter-species relationship. Although not actually targeted at young adults, that is where Stephenie Meyer's audience lies – a group of self-conscious adolescents trying desperately to integrate into the world of dating.

So dystopia has quickly become the genre of the teens. But why has it become fashionable? Have teenagers fallen into an eternal existential gloom caused by the recession, increased university fees and the prospect of never being employed? To me, I do believe that politics play a part in dystopia becoming a trend. Young adults are more politically aware, especially in regards to the Coalition Government altering their lives so much, so fast, that rebellion and oppression feels very real to them.

Controversy, compelling characters, driven plotlines, narcotic waves of descriptive writing, topics which are relevant and reverent: these are the ingredients to a successful teen craze.

Buried in the park

SOMETIMES when looking at historical records they seem quite easy to understand. At other times, you have to work out what they are talking about. This can be frustrating, but also rather interesting, as I found out when examining the burial registers of the Abney Park Cemetery Company.

The burial registers date from 1840 to the 1970s (with a few gaps) and they are frequently used by people researching their family history. I was looking at volumes from about 1900. Some parts are quite straight forward and give the sort of information you'd expect, such as the name of the person buried, their age, last address, the name of the minister who carried out the burial and its costs.

However there are other parts that are harder to understand. Often this is because the person who entered the information used abbreviations and didn't provide a key to explain them. I was able to figure out some of the abbreviations. For instance 'Com Int' is short for 'common interment'. This refers to a common burial, where a person would have been placed in a large grave alongside a number of other unrelated people who died around the same time. This was a lot cheaper than setting up a private family plot, which involved purchasing land from the Cemetery Company.

One of the things that puzzled me was the name of the minister who carried out the burial ceremony. Looking at registers for different dates, there is usually only one minister who carried out the majority of the burials; for instance in 1900 it was Rev A O Palmer. A good guess is that the cemetery had a resident minister who was available for conducting services.

However, I also came across a number of entries for a 'Rev Own' officiating at burials. This looked like a rather unusual surname. It took me a few minutes to work out that it was a note that meant the family had brought along their 'own' minister to conduct the service.

When trying to understand an old document you sometimes find that other records created by the same person can help. In this case, we have a copy of the cemetery's scale of charges and regulations from 1900. It confirms that the cemetery had its own chaplain, although the company had strict rules about when he could carry out services. The mornings, up to 1.30pm, were for burials by a minister chosen by family or friends. The afternoons, from 2pm onwards, were for burials by the cemetery's chaplain. Any burials after 4.30pm had an additional fee. Any burials before 2pm by the resident chaplain also incurred an early service fee. This is helpful to know as it explains another abbreviation in the registers, which is 'E Serv'.

It seemed to me that it would help to understand more about individual burial entries if I compared them with other entries to see how 'normal' they were. I chose four weeks in September 1900 and looked at all the burials which took place during this time. There were 97 people buried during this period.

One thing I chose to look at was the age of people buried in September 1900. Ten out of 97 were babies under one-year-old: this was a time at which infant mortality was still high. Excluding children, the average age at death for those buried in private graves was 58.4. For those buried in common graves it was lower, 49.8. It is hard not to think that this shows a link between death and social status and wealth.

Interestingly, when I looked at the numbers of different types of grave, I found there were 63 private burials and 34 common interments during these four weeks. In other words, more than a third of the people being buried at Abney Park had common graves. The choice of a private burial or a common grave may have reflected a person's wealth, but common graves weren't solely for the very poorest in society – lots of people were buried in them.

I had assumed that common grave burials would not have a marker of any sort. However the cemetery's scale of charges and regulations corrected me here. It gives the sum of 10 shillings as the cost 'for permission to place inscription on stone fixed by the Company over a Common Grave'. However this was only a temporary marker, as the regulations add that memorials on common graves will not be allowed to stay up 'for more than 14 years from the date of the first interment'.

I think looking closely at the records has helped me to find out more about burials in Abney Park, but there are still parts of the documents that I don't understand. Perhaps we'll never be able to figure them out. Another common problem with archives is that often things don't survive, and we've certainly found references to records from Abney Park Cemetery which no longer exist. However, I hope what I have found out will help future researchers, and it was fun to piece it all together.

The Mayor and Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections were in May 2010. Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map opposite. Most councillors do not hold surgeries in August, to check if your ward is affected call the number below .

A healthy eating programme from Shoreditch Trust

www.shoreditchtrust.org.uk

Shoreditch Trust ShoreditchSpa

IN this edition, Shoreditch Trust presents a recipe from its healthy eating programme which aims to help residents produce healthy, tasty and seasonal food throughout the year.
This latest recipe offers a healthy spin on the Italian dumpling gnocchi. Although traditionally made from semolina flour, potatoes and spinach, this replaces greens with beetroot to increase the fibre and nutrient contents. Beetroot is a rich source of potent antioxidants and nutrients, including magnesium, sodium, potassium and vitamin C and betaine.
Claudia Manchanda, Healthy Eating Manager for Shoreditch Trust, said: "Once cooked your gnocchi can be served with a range of delicious sauces, such as a sage and butter sauce, a simple tomato sauce, or a creamy white sauce. Plus they always taste great simply topped with Parmesan."

Beetroot gnocchi

Makes 6 portions

Preparation time 45 mins

Cooking time 1 hour

Ingredients

- 500g potatoes
- 200g plain flour
- 1 beetroot
- 75g cup Parmesan cheese (grated, finely)
- 1 egg (lightly beaten)
- Black pepper (to season).

Method

- Preheat the oven to 180C or gas mark 4. Lightly score or prick the potatoes and place on a baking tray. Bake in the oven for 45-60 mins
- Wrap the beetroot in foil and cook in a moderate oven for about the same time, until tender
- Allow the potatoes to cool until comfortable enough to handle. Cut in half and spoon the cooked potato out of the skins into a large bowl. Take the beetroot out of the foil then blend to make a smooth puree
- Finely mash the potato (or put through a potato ricer). In a bowl add the flour, Parmesan, egg and beetroot. Season with pepper and mix until the potato forms a dough
- Working on a lightly floured surface, divide the dough into four. Roll each quarter into a sausage shape about 20cm long and cut into 2cm pieces. Shake off any excess flour
- Boil a pan of water, once on a rolling boil reduce the heat and add the gnocchi. When they rise to the top, they are cooked. Drain and add sauce of your choice.

Have your say on proposed Dalston special policy area

THE Council is asking residents and businesses in Dalston to have their say on a proposal to limit the growth of bars and clubs in the area.

Hackney wants to introduce a special policy area (SPA) to control the growth of licensed premises in Dalston, because it already has a high concentration of these kind of businesses.

The policy would also help to determine how the Council works with licensees and the police to manage the impact of the area's nightlife on residents, visitors and other businesses.

The proposed Dalston SPA aims to balance its vibrant night time economy, so that businesses continue to thrive and people can keep coming to Dalston for a great night out, with the need to protect residents' quality of life.

The SPA will help to manage the growth of licensed premises in the area and make sure they are well run.

The proposed Dalston SPA would stretch along the A10 from the junction of Kingsland Road and Middleton Road in the south to the junction of Stoke Newington Road and Evering Road to the north.

The Council's licensing service regularly inspects licensed premises to ensure that the terms of licences are being met. It also coordinates a night time fund in Dalston, which licensed business owners voluntarily pay into.

This fund helps pay for warden overtime shifts on Friday and Saturday nights, between 12am and 4am. Wardens are able to tackle ASB issues such as street urination and drinking.

For more information on the Council's proposals, attend a drop-in event at Dalston CLR James Library on 2 September, 4-8pm; or Kingsland Shopping Centre on 28 September, 10am-4pm.

To have your say, visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/dalston-spa; call: 020 8356 4942; e-mail: consultation@hackney.gov.uk

PUBLIC NOTICE
Proposed waste and recycling collection times

Hackney Council is consulting residents and businesses on plans to collect waste and recycling between set times. Time banded collections already run on many high streets in the borough to ensure busy highways are kept clear.

The introduction of time banded collections will mean that residents and businesses will only be allowed to place their waste out for collection at the specified dates and times set out within the proposals. Homes and businesses will have two time bands each day during which waste and recycling can be collected, one in the morning and one in the evening.

Roads proposed for the time banding scheme are listed below.

These proposals can be inspected during normal office hours (9am to 5pm) on Mondays to Fridays inclusive from 12 August until 9 September 2013 in the reception area of Keltan House, 89-115 Mare Street, E8 4RU or online at www.hackney.gov.uk/timebands

Residents and businesses can give their views on the proposals in writing to the Environmental Enforcement Team at the above address or by emailing enforcementsupport@hackney.gov.uk Consultation closes on 9 September 2013.

1 The roles of Speaker and Deputy Speaker do not attract a SRA but provision of an allowance is covered by separate legislation
2 Councillor Lloyd elected to forgo part of her allowance and received half of a Band 3(A) SRA (£32,555.49) to which she was entitled.
3 Unlike Councillors the Elected Mayor role does not attract a basic or special responsibility allowance. Instead the role attracts one overarching allowance that takes account of all aspects of the role.
4 Councillor Taylor was appointed as the Member of Adoption Panel in July 2012 and received a part of a Band 1 SRA (£2222.53) to which he was entitled.
5 Councillor Patrick was appointed as the Member of Fostering Panel in January 2013 and received a part of a Band 1 SRA (£2222.53) to which she was entitled.

Column 1 shows the Member's name; Column 2 shows the basic allowance paid; Column 3 indicates the Special Responsibility Allowance (SRA) paid, which is payable for positions within the Council which hold extra responsibility; Column 4 shows the responsibilities for which Members were paid an allowance; Column 5 shows any travel and subsistence expenses that were paid during the year; Column 6 shows any Childcare/ Dependents' Carers' expenses that were paid during the year; and the final column shows the total gross payments made to Members in the Municipal Year May 2012 to May 2013 (or part thereof).

As part of Members' roles and responsibilities they attend formal committees as well as ward meetings and surgeries. Members are also appointed to represent the Council on a number of outside bodies. Some of these are remunerated by the individual outside body. Council appointments to outside bodies can be viewed on the Council's website: www.hackney.gov.uk/Assets/Documents/Appointments-to-Outside-Bodies.doc

Schedule 2: Independent and Statutory Co-opted Members of the Council for the Municipal Year 2012-2013
In the Municipal Year 2012/13, the standard rate for attendance allowances payable to the Council's Independent and Statutory Co-opted Members was £109.48 per meeting, translated into an annual allowance by multiplying by the anticipated number of meetings.

The following allowances were paid to the Council's Independent and Statutory Co-opted Members between May 2012 and May 2013 (or part thereof).
